running away at a clip that beat aything ever shown by Arthur Duffy. In the remaining half minute he showed such class that it was evident to every spectator Cross could have finished the Philadelphian in four or five rounds if he had possessed a quarter of the latter's gameness and aggressposition ever seen on the east side, the home come and game fighters. He tore into through the ropes as if he were in a ment, developed under the unremitting ell, and although at times his arms dropped at his sides from his own and from the punches he stopped with his face, he always took a fresh grip, faster than before.

Cross, in the intervals of mixing that he indulged in from time to time near

But in the next round Loughrey land-ed several hard smashes in the body that forced Cross to run to cover railled after running for a while and mixed it furlously, outfighting the Quaker and nearly tearing his head off with rapid lefts and rights. Loughrey ORANGE OF THE ACT OF T made a whirlwind finish of it. When badly bowed tendons in the forelegs, hurry to catch a train, but Cross caught him and shook hands, grinning and volleying a rapid fire of congratulations, remarks about the weather invitations. remarks about the weather, invitations leg, caused probably by stepping into a to tea, market quotations, sporting gos- hole or on a rolling stone while making to tea, market quotations, sporting gossip and good nights. not barring even Jack O'Brien.

If Cross had been more confident—had fought half as willingly as Loughreyhe surely would have stopped the Quaker. He will probably stop him jf they ever fight again. He will beat a lot o' lightweights before he is through with the game, for he is becoming a great little fighter. All he needs is heart, and that will come when he gets a better line on his own ability to mix it up.

The great surprise, and greater satisfaction, the swelling disappeared almost as suddenly as it had come. Cement bandages were applied, and on removing them last night it was found that the terdons were perfectly straight, and there was no lameness. This report
